4 WHO WE ARE

10 WHAT WE DID

30 HOW WE DID IT
With your help and support, I am pleased to announce that we had another incredible year at Stout. Throughout 2019, we continued to build on our successful long-term track record. Our firm expanded on many fronts, our expertise continued to shine, and our client base remained robust. These accomplishments all stem from our team’s tireless, relentless pursuit of excellence and strict adherence to our team-oriented core values of being Positive and Team-Oriented, Accountable, Committed, Entrepreneurial, Relationship-Focused, Super-Responsive, and Great Communicators.

Our global reach continues to grow. We strengthened our presence in Europe by opening new offices in Berlin and Milan in 2019 and London, effective January 2020. We also expanded our domestic reach with our new San Francisco location. These additions round out our footprint to 24 offices across the world.

We had record revenue growth, as well, with a year-over-year increase of nearly 21%. Our team’s dedication to outstanding client service drove this success, backed by longstanding client relationships, commitments from new clients, and numerous high-profile engagements. In addition, our core service areas of Investment Banking; Transaction Advisory; Valuation Advisory; Disputes, Compliance, & Investigations; and Management Consulting expanded their revenue and client base. Within these core service areas, we also launched several new practices, including Artificial Intelligence & Digital Transformation, Transformative Change Consulting, and Technical Accounting.

None of these accomplishments could have happened without developing and expanding our talent base. We continue to build on our comprehensive training and mentoring programs to prepare our team members to take the next steps in their careers, and our robust recruiting process has brought in topnotch talent from outside of Stout. We highlight in this report our new senior team members and our recently promoted colleagues – the largest-ever number of professionals promoted at Stout in a single year. In addition, we partnered with PGA golfer Sam Ryder as one of our brand ambassadors. Like our many colleagues at Stout, Sam embraces the firm’s core values. The perseverance he has demonstrated early in his career exemplifies Stout’s brand promise of Relentless Excellence. When Sam is not competing on the PGA Tour, I hope you can meet him at one of our many client events this year.

I continue to be most appreciative of our hundreds of colleagues who demonstrate the excellence within our firm and go beyond expectations. Whether it is a client engagement, industry event, charitable cause, or nonprofit board membership, our extraordinary people make great things possible at Stout. On behalf of all the extremely dedicated team members at Stout from around the world, I look forward to more outstanding things to come in 2020.

TRUSTED BY LEADING BRANDS FROM AROUND THE WORLD
STRENGTHENING OUR TRACK RECORD OF DELIVERING RESULTS

We have significant expertise providing services spanning a wide range of industries and practice areas. As always, we are honored to serve our clients for their most important and complex engagements. Following are some of our engagements from the past year.

PRIVATE EQUITY INVESTMENT
Stout was engaged by an ISO-certified manufacturer of specialty fasteners with best-in-class responsiveness, turnaround times, and quality assurance to assist in a business transaction. Our client received an investment from a private equity firm that invests in lower middle market companies. Stout served as exclusive financial advisor for the client.

SELL-SIDE ADVISORY
Stout advised on the sale of a leading distributor of brand-name and private-label dental supplies to independent dental practices throughout the contiguous U.S. Our client was acquired by a private equity affiliate of a leading financial institution, and we served as our client’s exclusive financial advisor in the transaction.

INDUSTRIAL SALE
Stout advised on the sale of an industry leader in supplying pipe, valves, and fittings (PVF) to oil and gas companies servicing key U.S. basins. We served as exclusive financial advisor to our client, who was acquired by one of the largest metals distribution and processing companies in North America.

STRATEGIC MULTI-PARTY ACQUISITION
Stout served as exclusive financial advisor to a leading healthcare facility organization. We work with the business on the sale of its one assisted living and five skilled nursing facilities in the Detroit metropolitan area. Previously operating as a joint venture, these six facilities manage 1,062 beds, employ over 2,000 people, and are highly rated for their superior quality care. The company’s CEO acquired one of the skilled nursing facilities, which he now independently owns and operates. The remaining five entities were acquired by a leading skilled nursing and senior living company.

VALUATION OF 6,000 TECH PATENTS
Stout valued portions of a portfolio of over 6,000 patents related to technologies associated with multicore processors, Wi-Fi, LTE/5G, handheld device user interfaces, and cloud computing services. The valuation was performed for an institutional alternative investment management firm considering providing debt financing to the patent portfolio owner using the portfolio as collateral. The client chose to issue debt to the patent portfolio owner in part due to Stout’s valuation.

RIGHT OF PUBLICITY, TRADEMARKS FOR ESTATE
Stout valued the right of publicity of a famous media company founder along with 172 trademarks registered in 62 countries related to the person’s name and initials. The valuation was performed using an Income Approach based on projecting the future cash flows expected to be earned from the use of the relevant assets in various commercial ventures. The valuation was performed for estate tax reporting purposes.

LEGAL TECHNOLOGY IMPLEMENTATION
We were engaged to assist the largest health insurer in Michigan in creating a three-year legal technology roadmap. Following the roadmap and technology prioritization, we helped the client evaluate, select, and implement two systems to support the operations function of their in-house legal department. The goal was to increase efficiency, transparency, and collaboration within the office of the General Counsel, instilling cost and risk management controls and enhancing their ability to serve their business counterparts.

We managed the vendor analysis and selection process for both Matter Management and Document Management systems and provided implementation plans for each solution. During implementation, we led the design workshops, and in conjunction with the client, we worked with the vendors to ensure the products were configured to the client’s design specifications and requirements. We also worked with both vendors to facilitate data exchange between the two systems, improving the user experience and increasing internal efficiency.

The project culminated with heavy change management efforts, leading the client through the user acceptance testing process, conducting user training, and providing onsite support at time of launching the two new integrated systems for enduring success.
We were engaged to assist in providing litigation support to a financing arrangement. Stout was engaged to advise the board of directors in connection with a stock redemption transaction.

Our analysis primarily relied on the projected cash flows of the company, and included the analysis of trading multiples and recent mergers and acquisitions of similar companies. We determined the ability of the company to fund its continuing operations and to meet debt service obligations of the post-transaction capital structure. Our work also included a sensitivity analysis with several purposes: provide management with a sense of the company’s ability to continue satisfying debt obligations; and operate the business without undue stress in the event of unexpected turbulence that would result in lower-than-expected future cash flows. We delivered an opinion to the board of the company, providing information to enable the board to recommend proceeding with the transaction.

Stout served as the exclusive financial advisor to a $3 billion global leader in the rigid plastic packaging and recycling industries with more than 40 production sites across the globe with operations throughout North America, South America, Europe, Africa and Asia. Stout was engaged to advise the board of directors in connection with a stock redemption transaction.

Prior to the bankruptcy, our client agreed to forgive the debt in exchange for the debtor’s seismic data library. One of the key issues that was to be litigated was the value of the geophones and associated equipment. We co-wrote an expert report that was used to settle our client’s claim against the debtor.

VALUATION FOR REGULATORY COMPLIANCE

Stout was engaged to assist a private equity fund family, a leading provider of capital to independent energy companies. The matter called for the evaluation of the arm’s-length nature of the interest rate applied to certain intercompany financing transactions between certain feeder and blocker entities of various funds. Stout’s analysis was requested for U.S. income tax purposes related to transfer pricing under Internal Revenue Code ("IRC") Section 482 and the Treasury Regulations promulgated thereunder related to the pricing of intercompany transactions.

In performing our analysis, Stout considered all applicable methods under IRC Section 482. Based on the intercompany financing transactions and available market data, an unspecified method (based on the principles of the Comparable Uncontrolled Services Price ("CUMP") Method) was selected as the best method. In determining the appropriate arm’s-length interest rate between the feeder and blocker entities, we determined the borrower’s credit rating. We conducted a market-based analysis of similar debt instruments and credit ratings to determine the appropriate marketable yield for the intercompany financing transactions. We made further adjustments, as applicable, related to the illiquidity or lack of marketability of such intercompany financing transactions.

VALUATION OF HEALTHCARE REPORTING UNITS

We perform goodwill impairment testing annually for a $4 billion publicly traded manufacturer of over-the-counter (OTC) healthcare products, infant formulas, branded OTC products, and generic pharmaceutical products. Specifically, we determine the fair value of six reporting units. We also analyze the fair value of certain indefinite-lived assets and test for the recoverability of certain long-lived assets. Company management relies on our work to satisfy financial reporting requirements. We also assist management with various long-term planning and organizational strategies by performing discount rate and pricing multiple sensitivity analyses related to the impact on reporting unit and intangible asset value under different scenarios.

ACQUISITION ACCOUNTING

Stout was engaged by a franchisee of fast-casual restaurants to perform an acquisition accounting valuation related to the purchase of 368 franchised restaurants located across nine states. Our scope of work included valuing the acquired personal property, real property, leasehold interests, and franchise agreements. We valued all of the assets outlined within our scope and within management’s timeline, which allowed management to meet its financial reporting requirements.

GOODWILL, ASSET IMPAIRMENT TESTING

Stout was engaged by an international manufacturer of tableware products to assist in its annual impairment testing procedures. Specifically, our scope included goodwill impairment testing for six reporting units, long-lived asset impairment testing for six reporting units, and impairment testing related to four of the company’s indefinite-lived trade names. Our analysis was utilized by the company’s management team to satisfy financial reporting requirements.

EXPERT TESTIMONY – BUSINESS VALUATION DISPUTE

We were retained to provide an expert report and expert testimony related to a business valuation dispute. Our clients, the selling shareholders of a trucking company and the ESOP trustee, were being investigated and sued by the Department of Labor related to the valuation... that was utilized to effectuate an ESOP’s purchase of stock. The Department of Labor hired a valuation expert who opined that the ESOP had materially overpaid in the transaction, and that the ESOP had been damaged by the selling shareholders and the ESOP trustee because the ESOP had paid too much to the selling shareholders for their stock. We reviewed and analyzed the Department of Labor’s claims and support, as well as the expert report issued by the opposing business valuation expert. Upon finding numerous flaws in the claims made by the Department of Labor and material errors in the valuation report prepared by the opposing expert, we issued an affirmative valuation report that showed that the price that the ESOP paid was fair and also issued a rebuttal report that demonstrated the errors in the opposing expert’s valuation. Upon the release of our expert report, the case settled within one week with a favorable resolution for our clients.

VALUATION FOR BUSINESS COMBINATION

We were engaged to provide a valuation of various assets and liabilities relating to a business combination by one of the world’s largest providers of third-party insurance claims administration services. The subject company had been purchased by a premier private equity company. Intangible assets valued included three different trade names, two groups of internally developed software, and two groups of customer relationships. We also examined over 60 transferred real estate leases for favorable or unfavorable terms. Our conclusions were used by the subject company in the reporting of fair values on the balance sheet following the completion of the transaction.

MISAPPROPRIATION OF ASSETS INVESTIGATION

We were retained by the owners of a professional services company to investigate the extent to which a former employee had misappropriated assets. Our investigation included email reviews, computer forensics, credit card and bank statement analysis, purchase and expense report analysis, and interviews. Throughout our investigation, we coordinated with outside counsel, as well as with the company’s financial and tax accountants. We then briefed the company’s owners, and, at the request of the owners, federal law enforcement on our findings. Last, we provided fraud risk-prevention best practices to the owners to mitigate future losses.

IP SALES PRICE ASSESSMENT

Stout assisted the owner of more than 2,300 patents essential to the LTE telecommunications standard to determine a potential sales price for the portfolio. The valuation was performed to help prepare the client for a negotiation with a potential buyer.

APPRAISAL DEFENSE IN IRS AUDIT

In 2015, Stout’s professionals prepared an appraisal for gift tax purposes of a derivative on a carried interest in a private equity fund with $1 billion in committed capital. Late in 2018, the IRS audited the gift tax return, calling into question certain aspects of the valuation, including the concluded discounts for lack of control and lack of marketability, which exceeded 15% and 45%, respectively. We engaged in discussions with the IRS engineer, defending the conclusions drawn in the appraisal report. In late 2019, the IRS and the client settled the audit with a modest change to the controlling interest value of the derivative, but with no changes to the discounts for lack of control or lack of marketability.

Following are Q&As with a small sampling of the great people at our firm who embody Relentless Excellence® every day.

Ramiro Balladares
MANAGER
Disputes, Compliance, & Investigations
HOUSTON

What are some of the things you like about working at Stout?
When I think about my time at Stout, the thing I like most about the company is its culture. The people at Stout are smart and inclusive, the work is challenging and interesting, and there are great opportunities for career development.

What are some of your main job duties, and how has your role evolved since you began at Stout?
When providing company-side advisory I assist in the development of strategic turnaround plans with alternative restructuring solutions to address short-term cash needs and longer-term profitability. I utilize a data-driven approach in the development of 13-week cash forecast models, integrated three-statement financial models, and ad-hoc financial models. I have to say that my role has evolved every year I’ve been with the company, and that is a testament to Stout’s culture. So, every year when preparing my goals for the upcoming year, I have been encouraged to take on more responsibility and take more ownership in the projects I work on.

What do you like about working on restructuring and commercial litigation matters?
I like that no two engagements are the same. I get exposure to distressed companies in different industries that are dealing with different issues. Every engagement brings new challenges and opportunities to learn and grow as a professional.

What attracted you to come work for Stout?
My path to Stout was probably a bit different than that of most of my co-workers. During my second year of business school, I decided to take a financial restructuring course as part of my finance concentration. For my final project, my professor invited other restructuring professionals as guest judges to help him evaluate student presentations. Lucky for me the day of my presentation Loretta Cross, Stout Managing Director and Leader of Houston’s Bankruptcy and Restructuring practice at the time, was the guest judge. I have to say, she was tough on me during the Q&A portion of my presentation, but in the end, she must have been impressed because she gave me her business card and asked me to call her office if I was interested in interviewing for a position on her team at Stout. From there, the rest is history.

What did you do before working at Stout?
I joined Stout after graduating from business school in 2016. However, prior to business school I served as the local economist at the U.S. Embassy in Managua, Nicaragua, where I drafted diplomatic cables related to economic developments in the country and served as an institutional memory for foreign service officers cycling through the country.

What drives you to do a good job?
First, I enjoy the work that I do! Also, as a company, we are the work product we deliver to our clients. My reputation is very important to me. Therefore, I always do my best.

What do you enjoy doing in your free time?
Spending time with my wife and three-year-old daughter. As you can imagine our three-year-old keeps us plenty busy. I also enjoy travelling, working out, and going to the movies.

What’s a fun fact about you?
Throughout my life I have lived an equal number of years in two different countries – Nicaragua and the United States. I guess that truly makes me a product/son of two nations.
What are some of the things you like about working at Stout?

I love the collaborative nature of my group, which in part is due to Stout’s emphasis on culture. As a group, we always think of the team rather than the individual; this makes work much more enjoyable and productive.

At Stout, we are encouraged to be innovative and entrepreneurial whether you are an entry-level Analyst or an experienced Managing Director. No idea is too inconsequential to be considered, which makes us, the employees, feel like our voices and ideas are acknowledged.

What are your main job duties, and how has your role evolved since you began at Stout?

My role as Vice President on my team requires me to manage and execute various projects at one time, mentor the analysts and associates, participate in recruiting efforts, develop learning tools specific to our group, assist in marketing materials (i.e. thought leadership articles, one pagers, webinars, etc.), and develop innovative ideas for group expansion.

I joined Stout about four-and-a-half years ago as an Analyst. Back then, our team was much smaller, with five people total, and much newer – Stout Managing Director Harris Antoniades had just started the group not too long before. My role has changed because I am now a Vice President, but it has also changed because of the number of people on our team now. As an Analyst, I was involved in many multiple group efforts that I am currently involved in, such as recruiting and marketing. This was one of the many reasons why I enjoyed my time at Stout from the beginning. I was able to be involved in many aspects of growing our group besides just focusing on client work, which, of course, was also important. I had many responsibilities, such as writing articles, leading recruiting efforts, and creating modeling templates, which entry-level employees aren’t always allowed to be involved in. We still focus on a lot of the same things because we are constantly trying to enter new markets, recruit new talent, and increase efficiency. But with a larger team, more is possible.

What do you like about working on complex valuation matters?

I like that my work continues to challenge me. The industry is constantly changing in what its needs and accepted practices are. It allows me to continue to my own pursuit of knowledge and expand my expertise.

What attracted you to come work for Stout?

I knew that there would be a lot of opportunities at Stout. The team I was joining was still developing so it seemed like there was a lot to learn, both on the specific subject matters and career development. Talking to everyone also made it clear that culture was an important aspect of the company. It seemed like the company focused on the people and that our opinions matter.

What did you do before working at Stout?

Before Stout, I had just finished my Master in Financial Engineering degree at UCLA. Stout was actually my first job out of school. Before my MFE at UCLA, I had intended to pursue a career as a medical doctor. I graduated undergrad from University of California-Berkeley in Integrative Biology, and I then attended the Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai [New York]. Midway through grad school, I knew that I didn’t have the passion to continue pursuing medicine. I had always been drawn to quantitative topics and had an interest in finance so I decided to get my MFE in order to facilitate my attempt at a career change.

What drives you to do a good job?

One of the things that drives me to do a good job is working on a team. Working on a team can help develop many of the skills that are necessary for us to be successful in our jobs and lives. Everyone on the team has different ideas and opinions, which inspires me to learn from others and to expand my knowledge. As a manager, working on a team has also taught me to be a better listener and to be more patient.

Another thing is the growth of our group. Being able to experience how much our group and team members have developed in the last few years has been rewarding. It’s great to know that our efforts have resulted in not only higher revenue but also the improvement of our skills.

What do you enjoy doing in your free time?

A lot of things! Playing and hanging out with my nine-month-old Labrador puppy, who loves to play fetch, swim, and go out on long walks. Going to Los Angeles Rams games with my fiancé and friends. Biking to the beach. Going to concerts and music festivals. I also love traveling to new places. I try to go to at least one international destination every year. I just came back from a two-week trip from China with my family and went to Australia last year.
What are some of the things you like about working at Stout?
The culture, the sense of team. The environment is conducive to cross-practice collaboration to get results.

Can you describe some of your main job duties?
I manage and grow the healthcare consulting arm under Stout’s healthcare umbrella.

What drew you to focus your career on the healthcare sector?
I rather fell into it after my undergraduate degree. But as I “grew” in the field I was drawn to how vibrant, dynamic, and ever-changing the healthcare sector is. It is never dull!

Healthcare is a continually evolving industry. What are some of the benefits and challenges you’ve experienced over the years?
You hit the nail on the head. The evolving dynamism of healthcare delivery keeps the “space” fresh. The challenges can be the bureaucracy and what keeps the area exciting can also make things challenging: Nothing is static, and the whimsy of the government can force change.

You’re a regular contributor to Forbes. What types of feedback have you received on your articles?
The Forbes gig has been interesting and good for the Stout brand. The article that stands out most is one I wrote about the use of physician extenders [physician assistants and nurse practitioners]. I received a fair amount of feedback from a couple of doctors and from the AANP [American Association of Nurse Practitioners]. I’ll just say that while I was simply pointing out the practical reality in the current care delivery model, the article stirred up some “interest” on both sides of the aisle.

What attracted you to come work for Stout?
The opportunity to grow the healthcare consulting practice. Stout CEO Craige Stout, Managing Director Greg O’Hara, and company have empowered me to do what I feel I need to do to get the healthcare consulting practice moving forward.

What did you do before working at Stout?
Most recently, I was the Senior Vice President of Practice Management for Coker Group. I essentially ran the outpatient consultancy. I’ve been in the healthcare advisory space for nearly 12 years. Prior to that I ran medical practices and participated in a venture capital-funded healthcare startup.

What drives you to do a good job?
I tend to be binary; it’s either great or it’s not. So, while it may sound Pollyannaish, I strive for “great” and strong results for the client. I love the opportunity to offer quantifiable results and please the customer.

What do you enjoy doing in your free time?
Spending time with my wife; we’re empty nesters. When I’m in town and not on the road for business, I try to help out coaching women’s lacrosse. I’m a high school certified women’s lacrosse official. I play ice hockey (goalie), too. I also try to do some fiction writing, but there are only so many hours in the day.

What’s a fun fact about you?
Maybe my largest brush with fame: I almost ran author Patricia Cornwell’s business. She is the author of the Kay Scarpetta series of novels, which were big in the ’90s. It was a very interesting interview process. Also, at my advanced age, I’m thankful that I can still play ice hockey fairly competitively.

What do you like about working on dispute consulting matters?

I have always enjoyed how engagements vary wildly in dispute consulting. There are always new fact patterns to learn, new angles to investigate, and new challenges to overcome. I enjoy immersing myself in the details and mastering the key information.

During your career, what trends have you seen in the business and/or legal sectors, and what are some of the benefits and challenges of working in these sectors?

When I started in this field, document productions involved digging through boxes and boxes of hard copy documents and a lot more manual-entry of information. Now we receive large electronic document productions, which can make locating key documents easier, but we often find there is much more produced. A fair amount of my current work involves reviewing banking records, and we are continuing to see the technology improve in this area, as well. New technologies speed up the process of organizing and verifying the banking records, and more time can be spent analyzing the transactions.

What did you do before working at Stout?

I was hired into the dispute consulting industry right after finishing my undergraduate degree. I have worked at a few firms over the years. I also have worked with some of the same people during my entire career or a substantial part of my career.

What drives you to do a good job?

I suppose I’ve always been driven to help solve problems for our clients. I just want to get it right and make the client’s life easier. They came to us with a problem, and I want to solve it. I also think my parents set tremendous examples for my siblings and me. All three of us have strong work ethics, which carry into our respective careers.

What do you enjoy doing in your free time?

Spending time with my family is my number-one use of free time. At this phase in our life that means attending lots of soccer games and traveling for my son’s club soccer team. I love to travel and squeeze in time to go running where I can. This past year my son has started running with me. We’ve gone for runs in Palm Springs and Austin this year, and I’m looking forward to an upcoming trip to Miami where we will get another run in. It’s a great way for us to spend time together and explore a new area.

What’s a fun fact about you?

Growing up, vacations in my family almost always involved camping. My first camping trip was at six weeks old when my parents loaded my seven-year-old brother and me into the van, and we traveled cross-country camping in a new campground each night for two weeks.

What are the things you like about working at Stout?

The people! I know, it is cliché to say that, but it is very true. They are genuinely good people, and they do great work.

What are some of your main job duties, and how has your role evolved since you began at Stout?

I primarily lead our Coaching and Mentoring programs, which aim to build and foster relationships across the firm. I help to provide opportunities for our colleagues to seek mentorship, internal moves, and ways to get involved, and I also serve as a resource for employee concerns. I do this while also assisting with everyday questions about regular human resources responsibilities, such as benefits and payroll. I’m not your standard Stout hire, in that I’ve stayed in one specific group. I started as an administrative assistant with the Real Estate practice. From there I have moved around a bit until I found a home in HR. Teaching and leading our people in building relationships is the right fit for me.

What do you like about working in Human Resources?

It’s funny, I could say “The people!” again here. My role has evolved to a place that I am working with people every day. I help our colleagues solve problems in many ways throughout the firm, and I connect them internally (and sometimes externally) to help them grow and develop personally and professionally.

What attracted you to come work for Stout?

A wise woman told me to go to this interview. And if I were offered the job, I should take it because it is a great company to work for. She was not wrong.

What did you do before working at Stout?

I worked for a title company for five years during the refinance boom. Since coming to Stout, I was able to finish my degree in Advertising at Michigan State and utilize those skills internally here.

I think what drives me is probably similar to what drives... most of Stout’s employees. First, it is a point of pride; and second, I have a tad bit of a competitive personality. When you work with strong colleagues, they challenge you to bring your “A Game” every day, and I really like that about Stout.

What do you enjoy doing in your free time?
Most of it is related to my kids. I enjoy watching baseball tournaments as well as spending all day at a football field or lots of time in a gym for basketball games. At least that seems to be what I’m always doing with my free time. If I had my choice, I’d probably still do most of those things, but I might throw in a round of golf a little more often than I currently do. I might even join a golf league.

What’s a fun fact about you?
I’m a sports nut. I played rugby in college. I love to watch sports, especially rugby, football, and baseball, but also enjoy watching basketball, volleyball, swimming, golf, anything really. I love to play sports, even though at my age my body has a differing opinion. I’m also an avid Michigan State fan. I also love my kids more than anything in the world, but that is probably pretty obvious for most moms.

Mathis Wilke
MANAGING DIRECTOR
Investment Banking
BERLIN

You helped to establish Stout’s Berlin office in 2019. What attracted you to the company?
I loved that Stout had a solid commitment to excellence. I saw that there was an extraordinary level of trust throughout the firm, and I was impressed by the longevity of relationships with clients and colleagues. I also recognized Stout’s ability to grow the business, particularly in the Investment Banking group, and attract talent around the world.

Can you describe some of your main job duties?
As part of the Investment Banking group, my team is asked to help German and European business owners, executives, and entrepreneurs reach their strategic goals worldwide. We work closely with all Stout colleagues to help our global client base execute transactions in Germany and other European countries. I also make sure that our team always and at all times is in a position to deliver the best possible outcome to our clients. As the German team has worked together for several years, I can fully rely on each team member so that we remain a very strong team and maintain our focus of serving our clients.

What are some of the exciting business trends you see in Berlin, in Germany, and in Europe?
Germany is the fourth-largest economy in the world. It is an economic powerhouse in the heart of Europe that is only waking up to its technological capabilities. The country has many centers of power, so our team spends a lot of time meeting executives, family businesses, and founders across Germany. Berlin, where our German office is located, is the capital and has developed increasingly into Europe’s technology center. This dynamic is no longer limited to software and internet companies, but is also increasingly found with automotive companies and suppliers. For example, Tesla just announced plans to build its European headquarters on the outskirts of Berlin.

You have many years of experience advising companies in the tech sector. What are some of the benefits and challenges of working in this area?
Like with any industry, our clients tap us for some of their most important and demanding projects. We always have to be able to deliver excellence, and we have to help our clients anticipate all potentially upcoming aspects as well as the dynamic tech environment. In many cases, innovation and technology can disrupt the status quo but equally allow for new opportunities that can be capitalized.

What did you do before working at Stout?
I initially worked with some of Europe’s biggest companies across a variety of sectors and products. Then I worked for a leading German middle market bank that had a strong market position with family-owned companies. With these clients, I focused on growth opportunities and digital transformation. I also headed the sector coverage for the technology, media, and telecommunications companies across Europe.

We take great pride in giving back to our communities and beyond. Our team members across all our offices regularly volunteer on numerous projects and provide financial support for various causes and organizations.

TANZANIA HUMANITARIAN TRIP

A group of 18 Stout employees and relatives traveled to Tanzania in February as part of a humanitarian trip. The team assisted with a children’s feeding program, where they helped prepare and serve food at Ngaramtoni and Mundarara schools. They also made updates to an existing chicken coop and added an addition that will expand the capacity for 200 new chicks. The group got a glimpse into Tanzanian culture through a tour of different living communities and participating in welcome rituals with a Maasai tribe.
STOUT’S FUTURE LEADERS IN FINANCE PROGRAM

Stout’s Future Leaders in Finance Program took place in Chicago, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, and Washington, DC. The two-day, interactive workshop allowed students to learn about the many aspects of the finance industry as well as what it’s like to work at a financial services firm. Through a series of presentations, case studies, and expert panels, students built and developed the knowledge and skill sets one would need to begin a career in finance.
PRO BONO SERVICES

One of the most valuable services we offer to the community is our expertise. At Stout, we not only help low-income individuals rebuild their lives, we help foster the organizations that address the underlying issues and challenges faced by underserved populations. As a result, Stout Director Robert Levine was selected as the recipient of the Champion of the Year Award for 2019 by the Human Trafficking Legal Center. Altogether, since our Pro Bono practice was formed in 2008, we have supported more than 75 organizations, and eclipsed professional fees of $4.9 million contributed to pro bono service.
